This month in brief

Performance

The Fund produced a negative return (before fees) in January, underperforming the benchmark. Performance was impacted by interest rate movements, which more than offset positive performance on credit factors. Interest rate markets saw sharp moves higher in bond yields in response to further evidence of rising inflation, which resulted in more rate hikes being priced into the short-end of the yield curve. These moves led to sharp losses across Australian and global fixed income products in general, with the Fund being one of the better performers on this front. Credit positioning benefited performance, as despite some weakness in risk markets, the Australian credit market was a relative outperformer, with positive excess returns from credit seen as the capital impact of modestly wider credit spreads failed to offset the income return. During the month, the Fund participated in primary issuance from Suncorp Metway, Commonwealth Bank of Australia and Bank of Nova Scotia (Toronto Branch).

Portfolio positioning

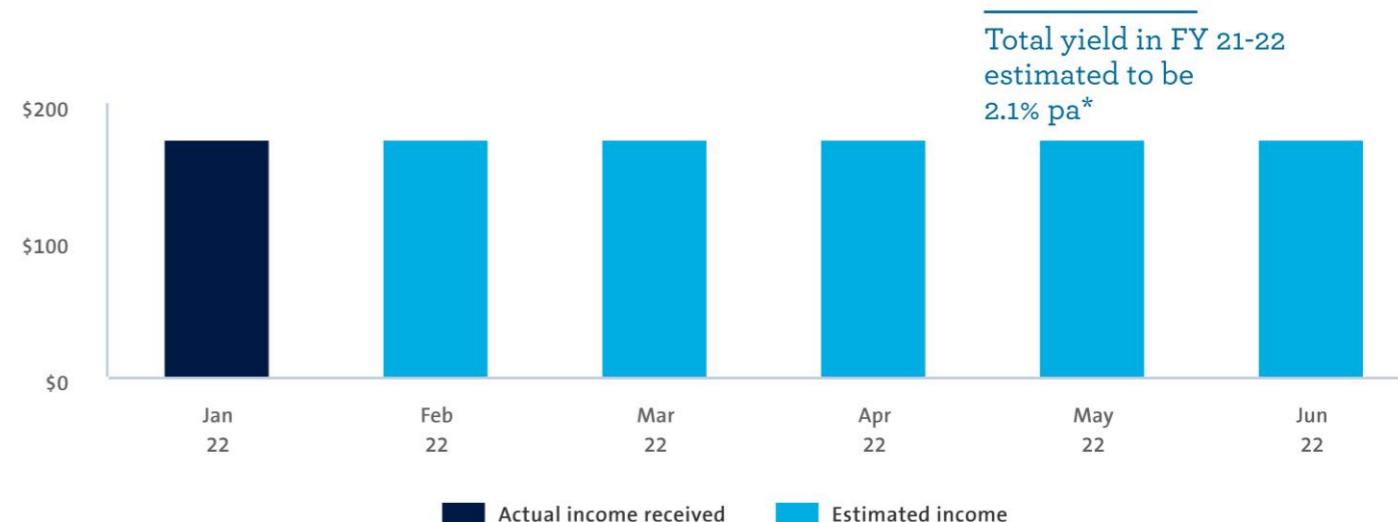

Current positioning has our credit exposures generating a strong level of excess yield, whilst not being overly exposed to any potential future bouts of volatility. More recently, we have taken profit on exposures that have traded within our expectations of fair value, whilst the Fund's credit protection strategies have done a good job thus far in managing the increase in volatility we have recently seen. Over the medium term, we continue to anticipate that credit spreads will ultimately tighten modestly given favourable corporate fundamentals, though shorter-term we expect a bumpy ride for markets as we adjust to the start of monetary policy tightening and with geopolitical issues percolating. Our fundamental sector and stock selection process continues to emphasise quality issuers whose credit profiles are supported by strong operating cash flows, sound liquidity profiles and an ability and commitment to maintain their credit ratings through this cycle.

Looking ahead

The global post-COVID recovery is entering a new transitional phase, with increased central bank hawkishness outlining an intention to normalise monetary policy from the current very easy policy settings, whilst remaining supportive of the ongoing recovery. Accordingly, we continue to see an uneven and bumpy adjustment phase across regions and markets, as real yields push higher, and investors reassess the impact of these shifts relative to asset price valuations. We expect that over the medium-term this will ultimately remain supportive for risk assets, with the deteriorating supply and demand backdrop offset by very healthy corporate fundamentals, but with the potential for shorter-term periodic volatility through this initial adjustment period, and or due to geopolitical or virus developments.

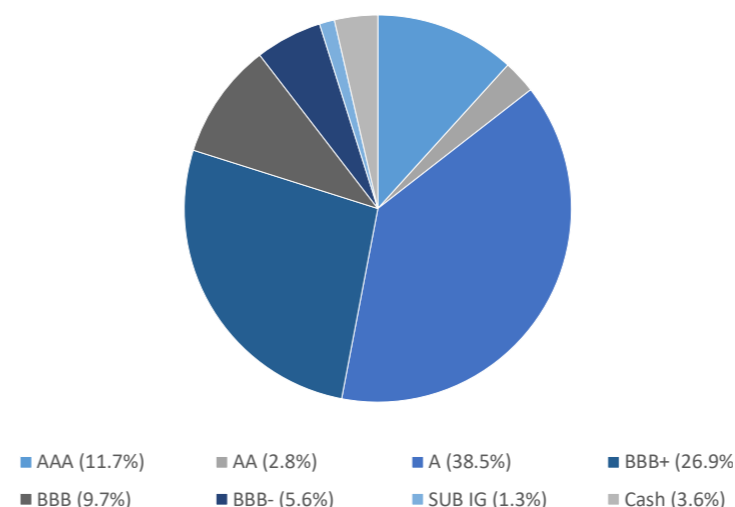

Plan your income

A forecast monthly income amount is regularly provided, and is currently estimated to be 0.175% per month until June 2022. For illustrative purposes, the chart below represents income based on $100K investment.

*Effective yield is based on the unit price at the start of the period. It is important to note that the final annualised distribution yield will not be known until the end of the financial year, that the distribution yield estimate isn't guaranteed, and that it may change over the period due to market movements in the Fund unit prices. We base our estimate on assumptions set out at the end of this document, and you should be aware that if facts differ from our assumptions, the final distribution yield may differ from the estimate
