Monthly Commentary – October 2021

October was a good month for Fairview unitholders relative to the ASX S&P Small Ordinaries Index. The month was generally positive for key international equity markets. The S&P 500 climbed 7.0% off the back of a strong US earnings season. These earnings were fuelled by US consumers reopening their wallets and listed companies demonstrating pricing power to cope with rising costs. In comparison, the ASX 200 declined -0.1%. This underperformance was partially driven by Australian 10-year bond yields rising 59bps to 2.08% during the month. Consequently, Australian banks also lifted their fixed rate loans substantially (in % terms).

Among the ASX S&P Small Ordinaries, the best performers were Bubs Australia (+45%), Aurelia Metals (+26%) and Australian Ethical Investments (+24%). The worst performers were EML Payments (-24%), Infomedia (-21%) and Codan (- 21%). This time last year Codan was one of Fairview’s top five positions. We sold our remnant minimum weight position during the month.

AGM season

We are midway through AGM season, with some amplified stock moves. Any hint of margin compression is viewed negatively. Reopening increased demand at the same time as increasing energy prices and have ensured both bond and equity investors are laser focused on inflation. It is now a battle between the Federal Reserve and the market. The chart below shows what the Federal Reserve is up against.
