Market capitalisation

Performance summary

- The Fund returned 1.69% in January 2022, compared with a return for the Benchmark of -2.20%, with a market rotation out of growth-dominated sectors in favour of value dragging on overall market performance.
- Traditional value sectors, led by Energy and Financials, moved higher in January, at the expense of the growth-dominated IT and Health Care sectors. For the Fund, the largest relative contributors on a sector basis were holdings in Financials, such as Popular, and an overweight to the sector, and holdings in Materials, including Methanex and BASF. Relative detractors included underweight positioning in Energy, and holdings in Utilities, namely NextEra Energy.
- Discovery and Marathon Petroleum were among the top individual contributors to performance in January. Discovery rose strongly after an analyst upgrade on the potential, following its merger with WarnerMedia, for the combined entity to create a “global media powerhouse” and “highly achievable” synergy target of $3 billion. Marathon gained on market sentiment surrounding capacity rationalisations, strong demand recovery, slow capacity addition, and low inventory among US refiners. The company also announced that refining margin had doubled from a year ago after the month end.
- Crocs and Bellway were among the top individual detractors from performance in January. Crocs announced it expects record 2021 revenue, with around 67% growth compared to 2020. However, after outperforming since the onset of the pandemic, the stock has come down sharply since hitting its peak last year. Shares in UK housebuilder Bellway declined following news that the UK government may ask the industry to pay an additional cost of £4 billion for the remediation of unsafe cladding.
