PERPETUAL WHOLESAL CONCENTRATED EQUITY FUND

July 2022

FUND FACTS

Investment objective: Aims to provide long-term capital growth and income through investment predominantly in quality Australian industrial and resource shares.

FUND BENEFITS

Provides investors with higher potential returns, through the active management of a portfolio of fewer stocks but with higher conviction, than our core Australian equity funds. This concentration may lead to increased short term volatility.

FUND RISKS

All investments carry risk and different strategies may carry different levels of risk. The relevant product disclosure statement or offer document for a fund should be considered before deciding whether to acquire or hold units in that fund. Your financial adviser can assist you in determining whether a fund is suited to your financial needs.

MARKET COMMENTARY

The Australian equity market broke its consecutive three-month downward trend to end July higher, as a rebound in recent laggards - including tech stocks, REITs, and the banks - assisted the ASX. An expected 50 basis point hike in the cash rate to 1.35% at the beginning of the month did little to quell investor sentiment. There was no substantive change to policy guidance, with the Reserve Bank flagging more tightening in the period ahead. However, the RBA also suggested that inflation is expected to peak later in 2022 and that its medium-term view is that inflation expectations remain well anchored. Markets subsequently dialled back terminal interest rate forecasts amid thoughts that plateauing inflation and a softening economy may prompt central banks to slow the pace of tightening.

This notion was supported by the June-quarter headline inflation print, which fell below expectations and reduced the likelihood of a 75-basis point interest rate hike in August. Trimmed mean inflation, however, hit a record high, spurred predominantly by the increase in fuel costs. Pricing pressures were also evident in clothing, housing, household equipment, and several food categories. Elevated freight costs, supply constraints, rising construction costs, and strong demand continued to drive up inflation and a rebound in rents. This, combined with softening macro data, the potential for a Russian gas shutoff to Europe, risks to US earnings and China, Covid uncertainty remain overhangs on risk sentiment.

Mining producers constrained the market's advance, underpinned by heavy losses across commodity prices over the month as concerns from demand destruction in a recessionary environment continue to mount. Significant iron ore weakness was further attributed to heightened frictions from China's real estate developers. This fragility was offset by solid performance across the Financials, benefitting from improved sentiment due to increased M&A activity and its low interest-rate sensitivity after the big banks moved quickly to raise their variable home loan rates by 50 basis points.

PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY

The Fund's largest overweight positions include Santos Limited, Insurance Australia Group Limited, and Iluka Resources Limited. Conversely, the Fund's largest underweight positions include BHP Group Ltd, Commonwealth Bank of Australia, and CSL Limited.

The underweight position in iron ore miner BHP Group (-6.2%) contributed to relative performance. The stock sold off alongside most of the miners following a decline in commodity prices as concerns of demand destruction in a recessionary environment continue to mount. Significant iron ore weakness (falling 17.5%) was attributed to heightened fears over China's real estate developers following reports of homebuyers boycotting mortgage repayments on stalled construction projects. China's real estate woes compounded broader economic growth concerns, threatening to hobble demand for construction inputs such as iron ore.

Not holding iron ore miner Rio Tinto (-4.7%) contributed to relative performance. The stock similarly declined over the month along with the broader mining sector, driven predominantly by the correction in commodity prices, particularly iron ore, which sold off on the back of demand concerns out of China.

Not holding oil and gas producer Woodside Petroleum (+0.4%) contributed to relative performance. The stock underperformed the benchmark, constrained by falling oil and gas prices, with WTI and Brent crude oil declining 6.0% and 6.9%, respectively, due to unfavourable demand and supply dynamics stemming from fears of a recession. This came despite reporting a 68% quarter-on-quarter increase in its June-quarter production, a +44% q/q increase in sales revenue, and an increase in its full-year Production Guidance to 145-153 MMboe (from its previous guidance of 92-98 MMboe).

The overweight position in healthcare services and hospital operator Ramsay Health Care (-4.2%) detracted from relative performance. The stock ended lower after reports suggested that the A$88 per share cash bid to acquire the firm by private equity firm KKR (announced in April) was increasingly unlikely to proceed. The report suggested several items impacting the bid, including market conditions, issues around due diligence materials and potential French competition approvals for Ramsay Sante, shifting property valuations impacting a potential real estate asset spinoff, and others as weighing on market confidence that the deal can get over the line.

The overweight position in oil and gas producer Santos (-1.6%) detracted from relative performance. The stock finished the month lower, dragged down by the fall in oil prices as well as its first-half financial results, which missed market expectations despite posting a record half-year sales revenue of US$3.8 billion and record free cash flow of US$1.7 billion. This was up 85% and 199%, respectively, over the prior corresponding period.

OUTLOOK

We have long believed that markets are poised for further rotation to a more value-oriented investment environment as Covid disruptions, waning stimulus, and war combine to keep consumer price inflation at high levels. Until June this year, equity markets were resilient in the face of the rate hikes, but bond markets have priced in tighter monetary policy much more aggressively. Historically, when the bond market and equity market disagreed, the bond market was usually correct. In our view, rising bond yields will eventually lead overpriced growth stocks into a more sustained and overdue correction, challenging investors with large growth exposures. We think, in the years ahead, markets will need to become accustomed to more inflation than previously experienced. This distinct shift in the macro backdrop is already playing out across asset classes. In these conditions, our focus on value style investing, buying quality companies with strong balance sheets trading at reasonable valuations, should continue to do well and offer attractive opportunities for investors.
