Performance summary

- The Fund returned 1.21% in August 2021. Trend-following systems profited from a buoyant market environment for commodities and stock indices, although non-trend systems offset some of these gains. Exposure to alternative markets was upweighted at the start of the month and Korean government bond futures were introduced at month end.
- Energies was the top contributor to performance over the month, as the Fund continued to profit from uptrends in coal, natural gas and European power markets. Trend-following systems also drove gains in stock indices and agriculture, where other technical non-trend systems made money. US equity indices, sugar and cotton were among the top contributors in the two sectors. Fixed income and currencies were the most notable detractors. Long positions in European government bonds lost money amid market reversals, while long exposure to the Canadian dollar and British pound weighed on returns in currencies.
- The Fund aims to deliver long-term returns which have a low correlation to traditional investments, such as equities and bonds, as a diversifying allocation within investor portfolios.
