Performance summary

- The Fund returned 3.21% in September 2021. Trend-following systems in energies accounted for most of the Fund's positive return, while non-trend systems were flat overall.
- Natural gas led the gains in the Fund's energies portfolio during the month, with long positions benefiting from soaring prices across US and European markets. Similar upswings in European electricity and coal added further to the positive contribution from the sector. These profits – combined with a more modest gain in agriculture and industrials – outpaced losses from fixed income, where long positions in G10 markets lost money amid rising yields. Non-G10 markets offered valuable diversification in this environment, with short positions in Hungarian, Czech and Brazilian rates making money.
- The Fund aims to deliver long-term returns which have a low correlation to traditional investments, such as equities and bonds, as a diversifying allocation within investor portfolios.
