Moderating inflation numbers and robust economic growth in July saw the markets doubling down on the “goldilocks” narrative of low inflation and a soft landing. This saw equity markets globally and in Australia push higher. The Fund continued to gain ground and finished up 1.7% for the month.

Within the equity market, robust global economic data saw a rotation away from crowded defensive equities and back into unloved cyclical equities, as equity investors unwound bets on an imminent recession. This was something we had been waiting for after selling our fully valued defensive positions, such as supermarkets and Telstra, in recent months and adding to beaten up and unloved banks and cyclicals. The Australian banks were up 6 to 8% while Telstra and Woolworths Supermarket fell modestly. As this rotation plays out (which typically takes a couple of months) we will reduce bank holdings and add back to defensive equities. We have begun to take profits on banks and add back to defensive equities in moderate size already.

Other stocks that were strong over the month were our small positions in Universal Store (+20.1%), Neuren Pharmaceuticals (+6.4%) and Monadelphous Group (+16.2%). We had added to Universal Store in June as it fell following a poor trading update. The decision to buy was based on our positive medium outlook for the business and we appear to have been rewarded earlier than expected on this investment. Neuren rose after signing a new distribution deal with Acadia Pharmaceuticals for its in-development NNZ-2591 drug for Rett and Fragile X syndromes.

Markets are pricing in optimistic outcomes in the near term for inflation and economic growth. This is probably correct in the near term but becomes a more dangerous prediction as we look into 2024, where we may see broader economic weakness or another inflationary impulse in the US. We are pleased with the Fund’s upside participation as markets move higher, while still taking relatively low levels of absolute risk. In August we look forward to Australian company results, as this tends to always throw up a few opportunities to buy companies that we believe are priced incorrectly following results.
