Monthly commentary

Commonwealth Bank (CBA) outperformed in May following growing confidence in its market position, its high quality and growing loan book and the potential for capital management. The company also held a strategy session which gave investors confidence in the strategic outlook for both traditional and new business lines. The thesis around CBA leveraging its high quality brand and customer base to extract more value remains intact.

Hub24 (HUB) outperformed last month due to a continued recovery from the March consensus downgrade event, when Netwealth disclosed it was in discussions with ANZ to re-price its wholesale deposit arrangement, impacting forward consensus profit expectations. We believe investors are increasingly appreciating that earnings impacts driven by excess market liquidity will prove temporary, with a rapid economic recovery and rising inflation expectations to end unconventional monetary policy, potentially sooner than currently anticipated.

Costa Group (CGC) released a disappointing AGM trading update, indicating its H1 will deliver marginal growth on pcp. The company cited very low Avocado pricing, Monarto labour shortages and a higher AUD as the main factors detracting from performance. Many of the issues CGC continue to face are transient but highlight the seasonal swing factors it is exposed to. The company's capital light and diversified business model allow it to invest through the cycle for growth.
