Performance summary

- The Fund returned 2.40% in January 2021, compared with a return for the Benchmark of 0.11%, with global equities recording a relatively subdued start to the year against a backdrop of economic uncertainty.
- Sector returns were mixed in January, with the Energy sector moving higher as oil prices climbed across the month, while the Consumer Staples sector lagged. Information Technology was the top relative contributor for the Fund, owing to positive selection in US IT. Financials also contributed positively to performance on a relative basis, driven by positive selection in Hong Kong Financials. There were no relative sector detractors for the month.
- Most regions were flat for the month, with the notable exceptions of the US, which moved lower, and a positive result in China. For the Fund, the largest relative contributor at a country level was the US, driven by positive selection in US IT, as mentioned, as well as positive selection in US Communication Services. Italy was also a notable relative contributor, mostly as a result of positive selection in Italian Consumer Discretionary. France was the largest relative detractor, primarily due to weak selection in French Consumer Discretionary.
- Arrowstreet employs a quantitative benchmark-aware approach, dynamically taking overweight and underweight positions in countries, sectors, and individual stocks, with the aim of achieving long-term outperformance of the Benchmark. Arrowstreet's core investment style seeks to outperform during a broad range of market environments, and its systematic quantitative approach allows Arrowstreet to react quickly through market volatility.
