Walter Scott Global Equity Fund

Macquarie Professional Series

Monthly report – 30 April 2022

Performance summary

- The Fund returned -2.56% in April 2022, compared with a return for the Benchmark of -3.17%, as equity markets resumed a downward path due to the ongoing conflict in Ukraine, the escalation of Covid-related lockdowns in China and associated concerns over rising inflation and supply chain blockages.
- IT and Consumer Discretionary were amongst the largest detractors from index performance in April. For the Fund, holdings in these sectors, specifically Mastercard and TJX Companies respectively, outperformed their index counterparts and contributed most to positive relative return. The largest relative detractors were holdings in Health Care, namely Intuitive Surgical, and an underweight to Energy. There were no initial purchases or final sales within the portfolio during the month.
- Looking through the Fund's technology holdings, the common denominator is Walter Scott's belief in their ability to leverage and drive trends that will endure beyond the looming economic draught. Amidst ongoing chip shortages, Taiwan Semiconductor recently reported an excellent start to 2022 accompanied by an upgrade in full-year guidance, expecting at least 30% revenue growth. Management struck a confident tone, with an expectation that the impact of a cyclical downturn in consumer electronic gadgets or smartphones will be offset by structural growth in high-performance computing, driven by cloud service provider demand, and automotive applications.
- Although near-term equity market conditions are likely to remain turbulent, Walter Scott remains confident in the Fund's holdings, and see opportunity amidst the turmoil. In the face of slowing growth or stagflation, demand contraction or a moderation of the growth trajectory can be expected. However, Walter Scott's long-term focus spans the ebbs and flows of cycles and crises, and conviction in the Fund's holdings rests in the rigorous application of the investment approach which examines, tests, and debates the investment rationale of each stock irrespective of prevailing market or economic conditions.
