Macquarie Professional Series

Monthly report – 31 August 2023

Performance summary

- The Fund returned 2.22%, net of fees, in August 2023, compared with a return for the Benchmark of 1.60%.
- Most sectors advanced in August in unhedged terms, led by Energy, Health Care, and Communication Services. For the Fund, the largest relative sector contributors included holdings in Financials, such as Aon and ICE, and holdings in Consumer Discretionary, namely Booking Holdings and eBay. Relative detractors included holdings in Materials, namely Corteva, and a lack of exposure to the Energy sector.
- News Corp. was among the top individual contributors to performance in August. The company released better-than-expected fourth quarter results. Digital represented more than 50% of total revenues for the full year, the first time in the company's history. The growth of business-to-business products in the Dow Jones division was strong and is likely to be the largest contributor to the division's profits next year. Further, subscription video service Foxtel returned to growth and is expected to complete a refinancing that should facilitate repayments of outstanding shareholder loans from News Corp., a first step towards a potential IPO.
- Electronic Arts was among the top individual detractors from performance in August. The company reported solid first quarter results, but management's guidance for the full year was weaker than expected. Franchise Partners are not overly concerned about the full year outlook, as it is driven by weakness in EA's lower-value shooter title Apex Legends and its mobile division. Importantly, performance of the company's core sports titles is strong, and Franchise Partners expects revenues and margins to improve next year once the multiple titles currently in development are released.
- There were no initial purchases or final sales within the portfolio during the month.
