Monthly report – 31 October 2022

Performance summary

- The Fund returned 7.31%, net of fees, in October 2022, compared with a return for the Benchmark of 7.81%, with the MSCI World Ex Australia Index recording its strongest monthly bounce since May 2013.
- All market sectors moved higher in October, with IT, Health Care and Financials the largest contributors to index returns, and Energy a notably strong performer. For the Fund, the largest relative sector contributors were holdings in Consumer Discretionary, such as Booking Holdings and eBay, and in IT, such as Oracle and Salesforce. Relative detractors included a lack of exposure to Energy, and holdings in Industrials, which lagged the rise of the broader sector, as well as an underweight to the sector.
- Oracle was among the top individual contributors to performance in October. The company issued long-term guidance at its annual analyst day that significantly exceeded market expectations for both revenues and margins. This was the first long-term guidance that Oracle had released in over a decade and reflects the strong progress made in transitioning both its application and database business to the cloud.
- Fox was among the top individual detractors from performance in October. Shares in the company declined following the announcement that its largest shareholder, the Murdoch Family Trust, is exploring a re-combination with News Corp. As the larger company, it appears the market is concerned that Fox would pay a premium to acquire News Corp. Franchise Partners are shareholders of both companies and think each of their share prices are materially undervalued. While Franchise Partners think there are operational benefits from a combination, the investment team believe it would be in the best interests of both companies for News Corp to have first completed the sale or spin-off of its valuable real estate portal assets. Franchise Partners will continue to actively engage with both companies on the potential equity combination.
- There were no initial purchases or final sales within the portfolio during the month.
