Fund commentary

The Russell Investments Conservative Fund underperformed the benchmark in May. The Fund's 70% allocation to income assets such as Australian and global bonds and cash tends to drive returns.

The Fund's traditional fixed income portfolio underperformed over the period with both the Russell Investments International Bond Fund – $A Hedged and the Russell Investments Australian Bond Fund posting negative absolute returns for the month. Within our extended fixed income portfolio, credit returns were also negative. Global high-yield debt fell amid rising borrowing costs for corporates, while the Russell Investments Floating Rate Fund was hindered by declining prices for loans and securitised assets. Partly offsetting this were good gains from Metrics Credit and the Russell Investments Emerging Market Debt Local Currency Fund. Our exposures to global and Australian listed property also weighed on returns in May as both sectors sold off amid rising interest rates. Within our global equity portfolio, the Russell Investments Tax Effective Global Shares Fund (TEGS), the Russell Investments Multi-Asset Factor Exposure Fund and the Russell Investments Global Opportunities Fund – $A Hedged (RGOF) all delivered positive absolute and excess returns for the month. Both TEGS and RGOF benefited from their value bias and strong stock selection in Japan. In contrast, the Fund's Australian equity portfolio was mixed. Both the Russell Investments Australian Opportunities Fund and the Russell Investments Australian Factor Exposure Fund recorded negative absolute and excess returns in May, whereas the Russell Investments Australian Shares Core Fund narrowly outperformed its benchmark. Meanwhile, in the currency space, a stronger Australian dollar impacted the returns of the Fund's assets denominated in foreign currency.
