Fund commentary

The Russell Investments Global Opportunities Fund underperformed the benchmark in the June quarter.

Contributing to the Fund's underperformance was stock selection in the US, including underweights to large growth names like NVIDIA Corp., Apple and electric car maker Tesla; all of which posted very strong gains for the quarter. Other US positions to impact returns were underweights to e-commerce giant Amazon.com and semiconductor manufacturer Broadcom. Stock selection in Japan also weighed on performance; notably ex-benchmark holdings in retailer Ryohin Keikaku Co. and electronics company Casio Computer Co. Both stocks fell sharply over the period. Performance was further impacted by stock selection in Canada, albeit modestly. This included an overweight to integrated energy company Suncor Energy and an underweight to multinational e-commerce platform Shopify. In contrast, the Fund benefited from stock selection in the UK, including overweights to private equity firm 3i Group and multinational energy services and solutions company Centrica. An underweight to British American Tobacco also added value. Stock selection in Continental Europe added further value over the period; notably overweights to Dutch bank ING Groep N.V. and German car makers Mercedes-Benz AG and Bayerische Motoren Werke AG (BMW). Stock selection in emerging markets also contributed positively to returns, though this was largely offset by our broader overweight to the region. Emerging markets underperformed their developed counterparts over the period.
