Portfolio performance

The Sandhurst Strategic Income Fund (Class A units) achieved an annualised quarterly return of 4.86% (after fees) for the June quarter. The running yield of the Fund is 1% greater than the benchmark.

During the second quarter, credit markets experienced gains, primarily led by the United States, where the technology sector benefited from increased enthusiasm surrounding Artificial Intelligence (AI) stocks. Most major central banks (with the exception of the US Federal Reserve) raised interest rates, resulting in higher government bond yields. Economic indicators across different regions provided mixed signals, which kept investors focused on forthcoming data releases. Commodities, particularly industrial metals and the energy sectors, faced declines due to concerns of a recession.

Australian credit displayed mixed performance. The technology sector outperformed significantly. Utilities, energy, and industrials performed well, bucking offshore trends. Conversely, healthcare, materials, and consumer discretionary sectors experienced losses.

The Australian yield curve inverted last quarter, which potentially signals a recession. However, most investors have downplayed the significance of this inversion. In contrast, the US yield curve is deeply inverted. Short term yields in Australia rose due to higher-than-anticipated inflation. Australian credit markets witnessed a healthy level of new issuance that supported the broader market. New deals were oversubscribed leading to a compression of credit spreads. Residential Mortgage-Backed Securities (RMBS) saw a pickup in issuance with $13bn in Australian dollar deals across 21 transactions.

Asset allocation

The Portfolio Manager remains cautious following the banking crisis in the US and maintains a conservative position. Fund exposure to term deposits has increased on the back of relative attractiveness of the asset class, which has assisted in mitigating volatility. The credit duration is at the lower end of the Fund's historical range as the allocation to short-dated assets remains elevated. The Fund is nimble and will reallocate when market sentiment and outlook improves. There are currently no unrated assets in the Fund and approximately 69% of exposures are rated AA- or higher. At the end of June, 31% of the portfolio is allocated to cash instruments, 35% in bank/corporate bonds and 34% to asset-backed securities.
