

UBS Tactical Beta Fund – Growth

August 2022

Fund description

The Fund is a diversified Australian and global portfolio with the long term neutral (or average) exposure to income and growth assets expected to be 30% / 70% respectively of the total portfolio.

Target market

The Target Market Determination (TMD) for the Fund sets out the class of consumers for whom the product, including its key attributes, would likely be consistent with their likely objectives, financial situation and needs. To access to the TMD and other Fund documentation visit our website.

Investment strategy

The Fund comprises a diversified portfolio of income and growth assets predominantly using passive funds, exchange traded funds (ETFs), direct securities, cash, cash equivalents and derivatives. The Fund tactically allocates between asset classes and currencies based on their relative value, in light of the overall risk and return of the portfolio. The Fund is not permitted to use leverage to amplify the exposure of the Fund to an investment.

Investment return objective

The Fund aims to outperform (after management costs) the Benchmark (see investment guidelines) over rolling five year periods.

Market review

The summer rally in stocks that started in mid-June went into reverse in August, with global equity ending the month with a negative return over the month. The weakening sentiment was mostly driven by the fading market perceptions that central banks were on the brink of a more dovish turn. The fears of Eurozone recession due to further restricted natural gas supply by Russia also added to the weaker sentiment. The US Federal Reserve clarified that the encouraging US inflation data for July was not sufficient to conclude that the threat to price stability had passed, and this was echoed by European Central Bank as well. As a result, yields of 2-year and 10-year US Treasury as well as European government bonds rose sharply over the month against the renewed pressure from central banks. China market, however, presented a diverging performance from the global market in August. Chinese equity concluded the month with a marginal positive return, however, this didn't change the market perception that China's economic outlook was not as optimistic as before.

Locally, Australian equity posted a positive return over the month and outperformed global equity. Australian 10-year government bond yield also rose over the month, given the hawkish stance of Reserve Bank of Australia. The Australian dollar depreciated against the US dollar over the month.

Commodities ended August nearly unchanged. This was driven by a mixture of rising agriculture sector and decreasing precious metals and energy sector over the month.

Performance review

After fees and expenses, the portfolio returned -1.56% (gross of fees return of -1.54%) in August which underperformed the benchmark return of -1.52% by 4bps. At the end of August, the Fund's equity weight was -0.5% underweight relative to the benchmark as we brought equity to approximately neutral in the middle of the month. We retained our regional preference for UK and turned modestly overweight to US, while reduced our overweight position to China at the beginning of the month given higher anticipated sensitivity to geopolitical flash points. We remained underweight to Europe over the month. From an equity sector perspective, we opened a position in World IT at the beginning of the month to diversify the sources of interest rate sensitivity in the portfolio, funded partly out of world minimum volatility. We retain our preference for healthcare and energy equities and further reduced our overweight position in commodities in the face of short-term headwinds.

At the end of August, we held a duration overweight after adding to duration in early August. We closed our short bund position, funded out of US treasuries whilst retaining an overweight to USD duration. We remain duration neutral in other developed markets including Australia. We also closed an underweight to US high yield expressed via credit default swaps to moderate active risk taken in the face of elevated volatility.

Foreign currency exposure was at 23.3% with key underweights in CNY, TWD, PHP, NZD, KRW, and GBP and overweight in USD, AUD, MXN, and NOK. We further increased our underweight to TWD and slightly reduced overweight to USD, funded by adding position to CNY, BRL and AUD in mid August.

Asset allocation

Asset Allocation contributed negatively to performance in August, with our fixed income trades detracting the most, while active currency trades and equities contributed. Our allocation to alternatives was flat over the month.

Our active bets within equity contributed positively to the relative performance this month. Our preference to energy equities contributed the most, followed by our overweight to UK equities and world minimum volatility. This was partly offset by our newly opened trade of overweight to information technology, and our overweight to China equities and healthcare equities.

Our overweight to commodities detracted slightly from relative performance this month.

Our call to take an overweight position in global duration in early August did not deliver as anticipated this month, detracting from relative performance. That said, our decision to close our underweight to Euro bunds during the month averted further underperformance later in the month.

Active currency trades in aggregate delivered positive contribution this month. Our underweight to Asia cyclical currency basket including CNY, TWD and KRW contributed the most, followed by overweight to MXN as well as underweight to PHP and GBP. Our overweight to NOK modestly detracted from relative performance.

Outlook

In our view, there is no strong tactical case to be either overweight or underweight global equities. Stocks remain expensive versus bonds based on the equity risk premium, and earnings estimates have started to come under mild pressure. However, sentiment and positioning appear extremely depressed, and the prospect of peak inflation in the US may be a sufficient catalyst for a further squeeze upwards in global equities. Long-term bond yields should be biased lower due to enduring recession risks and ebbing inflationary pressures. Central banks' commitment to tightening should lead to flatter curves and prompt investors to price in easing, down the road, to counter the ensuing economic weakness. Sovereign fixed income continues to play a diversifying role in portfolio construction by hedging downside in cyclical positions.
