Market and portfolio review

The S&P/ASX 300 AREIT Accumulation Index rebounded 11.8% in July. The ten-year bond yield falling 60 bps to 3.06%, having exceeded 4% mid-June, drove the rally, as the market prices in interest rate cuts to commence in the medium-term, looking through the forecast increases still expected in 2022. The US Fed's controversial pronouncement of being closer to neutral drove the yield compression in late-July. Yield curves flattened in Australia and inverted elsewhere, most notably in the USA, signifying a slowdown.

Real interest rates fell 55 bps, finishing at 86 bps. Implied inflation expectations declined marginally to 2.2%. This remains on the low side, given the data and expectations in the market surrounding inflation going forward, moving to an environment that we believe should see higher inflation and interest rates than witnessed in post-GFC, which was driven by some easing on globalisation and the associated, predominantly deflationary impacts. Entities reliant upon lower return hurdles, with a larger portion of active earnings streams (ex-Residential) drove the AREIT index up, led by the fund managers. Industrial rebounded, lower yields assisted in maintaining the sub-sectors tight cap rates. Global REITs also benefitted from these tailwinds, rebounding 7.7%. The general market (via the S&P/ASX 300 Accumulation Index) rose 6.0%. Materials was the sole sector to fall, as the global growth concerns rise. Only IT domestically outperformed the AREITs, benefitting from the dive in yields.

Future investment strategy

We continue to target Australian Real Estate Investment Trusts (AREITs) that provide solid fundamentals over the medium-to-long-term that are trading attractively relative to other AREITs. Overall we endeavour to invest in entities that offer a combination of:

- A Net Present Value ("NPV") Discount;
- An Internal Rate of Return ("IRR") Premium;
- Ideally a (Real, not manufactured) Free Cashflow Yield Premium; and
- A Lower Price to Net Asset Value ("NAV").
