MARKET COMMENTARY

The toll of COVID continues its drag on global economies, and global listed property has not been spared. Whether it is healthcare facilities on the frontline, shopping centres under lockdown, or offices cleared by WFH tenants, the impact has been deep.

But the news has not been all negative, as datacentres, logistics and warehouse facilities have been massive beneficiaries of online shopping and working.

It is highly likely that the global economy will continue to experience extreme stress into the early part of 2021, as lockdowns, infections, and very depressing high death rates continue. But arguably the world now has a path out of the COVID quagmire, with vaccines and a new prudent US president that hopefully point towards a slow return to normalcy.
